“ Bryan & I started talking on social media. I live in Australia. I love INXS. He happened to love INXS too. He said that he found a shirt at the local goodwill & sent it with the USA flag. We would talk for hours on end. Listening to INXS, talking about our lives, our ups & downs.

I was in a severe car crash & he was so devastated. My ex husband would update him on every detail. He would be updated on everything as he was family but on the other side of the world. If he could be there he would've been here.

How he cheered me on every step of the way.

Asked how Zack is, How Rónan was.

He was such a loving, caring, funny brother that we would cry together about the weirdest things. We would share the things that kids have today compared to what we didn't have.

We would talk about the weather, the dogs, the food we ate, the food shopping lists I was making, the dreaded bills that came in the mail, how I would have to go to pick the clothes on the floor after folding them up.

My complaints of nail polish smeared after not letting them completely dry.

When my father past away, I FaceTimed Bryan in tears. He sat there listening to me. He saw me punch a wall, he so wanted to be there for me & give me a hug.

We both wrote the words of what I should say at dad's funeral.

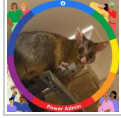

We always ended our conversation with

NTUA which always meant NEVER TEAR US APART

So Bryan...I LOVE YOU BROTHER!! I will miss you..I LOVE YOU..KNOW THIS IS NOT GOODBYE...I WILL SEE YOU SOON..

“ Bryan & I met in 1997 on the Hope College campus, we were friends ever since. Bryan made me laugh, he loved to chat it up, he was kind, had a dark sense of humor and always treated me as one of his very best friends.

In our college days we cruised around listening to The Cure, Portishead, U2, Depeche Mode and The Postal Service. On those memorable cruises we would talk about music, life, our shared faith and downright nonsense. 🙄 As life went on he participated as a reader in our wedding. He befriended my husband just as quickly and cherished us both.

Somehow I will miss his ridiculously long texts and long winded phone calls. He was my friend and part of our unbelievably cool friend group!

I am sad and will miss his silly greeting and how he always called me Sare. Pictured below is our last text to each other in November and as he said I was really “stuck with him until the end” and for that I am truly grateful. 💕

Rest in peace my dear friend you were gone too soon but I know we will meet again on Heavens Shore and believe in the hope that when we meet you will be fully restored physically and mentally. 💕
Love you Friender 💕

“ So many memories, so many adventures. Concerts and card games, bonfires and neighborhood stories, comic-con and obscure British comedy. I'll forever hold Stradley in my heart. He was a true and faithful friend.

“ Oh Bryan. What can I possibly say. I wish we hadn't lost touch over the years, but you've frequently graced my thoughts and have always been in my heart. I cannot think of my year at Hope - that first wild and crazy, utterly transformative year of college - without spending much of that time thinking of you. What a duo we made! I'll refrain from publicly posting our most special, private moments, but they live on in my memory and are as significant to me now as when they occurred 26 years ago. All my love, old friend.
