“ I used to work with Darien about a month ago, I didn't know him long, at least 7 months. He trained me a little bit at the job and we made a small friendship. He would tell me about how he wanted to get a business license and wanted to have his own cleaning service. He'd also tell me about random trips he had on the weekend off from work and you could see how happy he was in those moments. We would laugh sometimes about his trips to the gym or other places he would visit and people he gave nicknames for at work and he was also a kind hearted person, he helped me out at work because some people didn't know how to respect the cleaners and he would step up to tell them that was wrong. although him and I did have our differences I still cared about his well-being and had made a small friendship at work with him.
