“ Gail and I met when Jerry brought her to Michigan. We became friends immediately. The year after she married Jerry, she was in my bridal party. We had many episodes together, but one we always laughed about. Both our husbands were in the National Guard and participated in the annual training in Camp Grayling in northern Michigan. Gail and I always went up for the middle weekend shindigs. One year, Jerry and Gail had bought a brand new GTO that had a shift pattern I wasn't familiar with. We took turns driving that car north. When it was my turn, I would put in the clutch and yell shift, and Gail would shift into the next gear. We had a really great time and laughed often about that shifting. We also passed everything on the road in that fancy sports car.
