“ My favorite memories were actually of Uncle Wes this summer at Resthaven with my brothers and daughter Rachel...he was very talkative with a memory as sharp as a tack. He could remember memories and names of everyone he knew back on the street when he grew up. We learned a lot about Holland and our grandparents circa 1950s-1970s. While sitting on the back patio, one day the gate was open. I told him that we could make a break for Capt Sundaes. He grinned. I only wish we would have done it!

I especially enjoyed his humor and straightforwardness. During my last conversation with him during Christmas, I commented that they had put a very nice tree next to his chair. He replied, "That's a lot of malarky." Cracks me up every time I think of it.
